DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (II known) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

This is a large institutional church building in the Richardsonian Romanesque style. The main part of the church is basically square, with large rose windows in the gables facing east and north. The east entrance is a semi-circular arch over 22 feet in diameter leading to a recessed porch which opens into vestibules at each corner. There is a tower approximately 150 feet tall at the northeast corner and a smaller one at the southeast. The towers have round-headed lancets, rose windows, corner turrets and pyramidal roofs. The south side of the building is the Sunday school wing, which also has a gabled facade and large arched window on the east.

A contemporary description summarizes the interior arrangements: "The extreme length of the building, on (14th Street), is 132 feet, and its depth, on Starkweather Avenue, is 120 feet, with a projection of eight feet additional for the organ.

"The building covers 15,520 square feet. It contains 16 rooms on the ground floor, 12 rooms on the main floor, 15 rooms on the gallery floor, a total of 43 separate apartments, besides ample halls, vestibules, etc. Its cubic contents are 720,000 cubic feet. The auditorium will seat comfortably... a total of 1,250. The Sunday-school rooms are separated from the church auditorium only by a sliding partition, by means of which the two apartments may be thrown together for special services...

"The lower floor of the entire structure is given to the social and institutional work. It contains a reading room and library, 30x30 feet; . . . a finely equipped gymnasium (since subdivided), 58x26-1/2 feet; recreation rooms, dining and social room, 49-1/2x52 feet; Boys' Brigade armory, 30x33 feet; kitchen, 22-1/2x22 feet, with pantry and serving room; ladies' parlor; beside engine and boiler rooms. The ceiling of the ground floor rooms is eleven feet high, the entire floor being only two feet below the level of the ground."

The sanctuary (auditorium) itself is a lofty square space framed by four great semi-circular arches. Originally these arches were studded with electric bulbs, but they were removed in the 1950s in favor of a more indirect lighting system. The four arches terminate in smaller arches forming ribbed pendentives at the corners. The main ceiling culminates in a leaded glass dome 24 feet in diameter, artificially illuminated from above. The west arch frames the chorus and organ space, 19 feet deep. The pulpit and chancel occupy the southwest corner of the sanctuary, and the seats are arranged in a fan-like pattern. Across the north and east sides stretches the gallery.

The large rectangular two-story Sunday school room which opens into the sanctuary on the south is an impressive architectural space, with a coved ceiling and a gallery on three sides leading to additional classrooms. Its interior finish is virtually intact, although the sliding (continued) partition has not been opened for years. In the great framed attic space over the sanctuary the cables and pulleys for lifting the partition can be seen, as well as the upper surface of the glass ceiling dome.

Apart from redecoration, the sanctuary and the institutional rooms as well have been largely unaltered. Many of the stained glass windows have been repaired over the last five years. Much of the mechanical equipment, which was advanced for its day, is still in use. In 1920 a large but architecturally nondescript Community House with a new gymnasium, shower rooms and bowling alleys was added to the south of the original structure.

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

The Pilgrim Congregational Church is an important early institutional structure specifically designed for social and community work. While the exterior design is an excellent example of the Romanesque style and the sanctuary proper is a superior accomplishment in architectural space and decoration, two-thirds of the original structure is devoted to the educational, social and community work. At the time it was called "an epoch-making church building."

The church traces its origins to the establishment of a Sunday school in University Heights, as the area was known, in 1854. The University Heights Congregational Church was organized in 1859. The first building was erected in 1865-1870. The present building was begun in 1893 and dedicated in 1894. It became Pilgrim Church at that time. The structure cost about $150,000, and it was the first building on the west side of the river in Cleveland to use electricity. The architect was Sidney R. Badgley, who was active in Cleveland from 1887 to 1916. The contractor was Jacob Schade. The glass dome was designed by Elizabeth Parsons.

The first institutional work began in 1873 with the establishment of recreation rooms for the young men in the vicinity to keep them out of the saloons. When the Church Institute was organized as a department of the church in 1894, it maintained Fine Arts, History and Travel Clubs, a Literary Society, Boys' Brigade, Sewing School, a Gymnasium for men, boys, women and girls, and classes in bookkeeping, business arithmetic, penmanship, piano and vocal music. In 1899, at the request of the commissioners of the Paris Exposition, an exhibit was sent abroad and praised as the "finest example of an institutional church."

The church claims to be the first in Cleveland to participate in or to initiate a Visiting Nurse program, the organization of Women's Suffrage, the community fund campaigns which developed into the Community Chest, and teen-age canteens during World War II It continues this historic tradition today with a Police Athletic League program, Head Start classes and a senior nutrition program.
